Aim:

How did Filial Piety shape traditional Chinese culture?

Filial Piety:

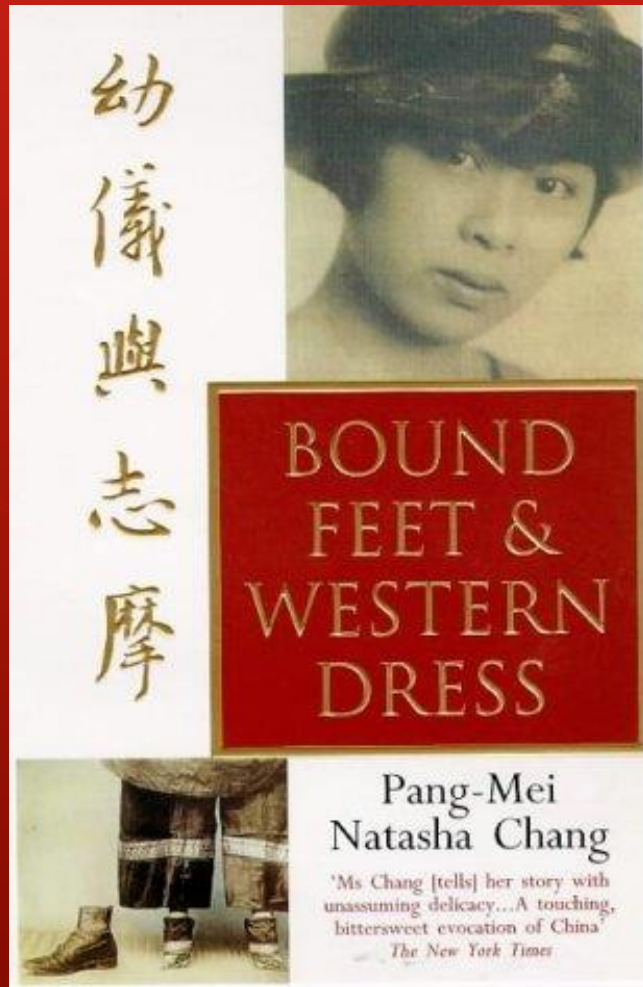

- A son or daughter was expected to respect the father in all things
- A son's loyalty to his father transcended all other obligations

The Traditional Family

- The family was based along strict lines of hierarchy
- Ancestor Worship: rituals in the home honored the previous five generations of dead ancestors
- The status of each member of the family depended on his or her position by birth or marriage. (Sex and age determined everything).

The Father

- Center of authority – his word was law
- Controlled all the family property
- Arranged the marriages of his children and grandchildren
- Punished disrespectful children strictly.
